New Journey/Nueva Jornada - a new path in ministry

by Suzy Keenan

It has been a long hard journey for this church. There were forks in the road - discord, unfairness, division - and then the forks merged back together to pave a strong path to ministry in the heart of this church and in the heart of the city of Reading.

New Journey/Nueva Jornada United Methodist Church is the name of this new church, created out of the merger of Central Park United Methodist Church, an Anglo congregation, and Emanuel-Olivet United Methodist Church, a Latino church.

In the early 1980's, Central UMC had birthed a new ministry to Spanish-speaking persons in the Reading community at the urging of Dr. David Fife, then district superintendent, who hired Dr. Irving Cotto to lead the new ministry. When Bishop Herbert Skeete re-appointed Dr. Cotto to a church in Lancaster, he brought Rev. Nicolas Camacho from Puerto Rico to pastor the Latino ministry, which became Emanuel UMC.

Deaconesses shares gifts of ministry

by Andrea Brown*

She has taught 1st and 2nd grade—and music K-S. She plays the piano and organ. She has helped Croatians and Cambodians learn to read English, and she has ministered tenderly to the ill and aging in hospitals and nursing homes.

Margie Greene has a heart for God's people, and that, along with her many gifts and her warm personality, makes her fit for a special role in the church.

Not long ago, Margie and her husband, the Rev. Garfield Greene, moved to the Willow Valley Retirement Community near Lancaster. And, thus, Eastern Pennsylvania Conference now has a second deaconess. (The other is Yvette Diaz.)

The little-known office of Deaconess, begun in 1888, calls lay women to full-time service "to express...the love and concern of the believing community for the needs in the world, and enable, through education and involvement, the full ministry and mission of the people of God," according the Discipline.

"Deaconesses function through diverse forms of service" following Jesus' call to his disciples to "alleviate suffering, eradicate causes of injustice and all that robs life of dignity and worth, facilitate the development of full human potential, and share in the building of global community through the Church Universal."

Men can serve in a parallel office, called Home Missioner. Both are organized, supported, trained, and commissioned by the United Methodist General Board of Global Ministries. The General Board of Global Ministries does not provide employment for deaconesses or home missionaries; they are encouraged to find their own positions.

The story of Mrs. Greene's ministry illustrates the important role deaconesses and home missionaries can play.

Having retired from teaching in New Jersey public schools, Mrs. Greene sought the special training and authorization of the office of deaconess as her ministry through her home church and in the wider church expanded.

With her husband, she visited in nursing homes and led worship there: "He preached. I played and sang." She also assisted with hospital visits.

She also planned and led retreats, workshops, and other spiritual-growth events for the Northern Shores District Office in Greater New Jersey Conference.

Seeing a growing number of Mexican and Latin American immigrants in their community, Mrs. Greene decided to begin a literacy program in their church. The deaconess program provided the training that equipped her to be a literacy volunteer. Before long, the program was serving Chinese, Ukrainian, Thai, Turkish, Croatian and Bosnian immigrants, as well, and it also helped non-literate English speakers to learn to read and write.

"Having come here, I have been in prayer about what the Lord wants me to do," Mrs. Greene says. She finds herself serving in two churches in the areas of hospitality and outreach.

At Lampeter United Methodist, her new home congregation, she works with the Lamplighters group, sending cards and offering support and prayer to those in need. She also teaches in the release-time program affiliated with the Lampeter-Strasburg School District.

The Rev. David Nissley says Mrs. Greene's relationship to the church is "kind of informal at this point" but that whenever someone is in need, theGreens are "usually about the first ones to respond with a load of groceries or whatever."

Additionally, in the Central Pennsylvania Conference, at Stevens Emmanuel Church in the Allison Hill section of Harrisburg, Mrs. Greene is helping a primarily Spanish-language congregation to achieve its goal of becoming fully bilingual. Her husband serves the church part-time.

In the meantime, she is waiting to see what else God would ask of her and is drawn to the National Church Adopt-a-School Initiative promoted by Dr. Tony Evans, an evangelist and senior pastor of a 7,000-member church in Dallas, Texas. "I'm looking to see how that's going to develop," she says.

Church agencies voice dismay at ruling on gun control

Two United Methodist agencies, disappointed with a U.S. Supreme Court decision on handgun ownership, are urging church members to advocate for legislation that would tighten federal laws on gun control.

In a joint statement July 1, the United Methodist Board of Church and Society and the Commission on Religion and Race said they were "deeply disappointed by the U.S. Supreme Court decision to strip local municipalities of the right to enact sensible and necessary gun restriction laws." A week earlier, the Supreme Court voted 5-4 that a Washington, D.C., ban on handgun ownership was unconstitutional.

In the Nation

Two United Methodist agencies, calling for social policies and personal lifestyles that bring an end to senseless gun violence.

In keeping with the resolution, the agencies "urge all United Methodists to continue to advocate for federal legislation in the U.S. Congress to regulate the importation, manufacturing, sale and possession of guns and ammunition by the general public." The resolution also calls upon all governments in countries with a United Methodist presence to establish national bans on ownership by the general public of handguns, assault weapons, automatic weapon conversion kits and weapons that cannot be detected by traditionally used metal-detection devices.

The agencies noted that, following the

The Nation in Brief

In Iowa, United Methodists are among a statewide interfaith consortium and action teams from local churches that are reaching out to the estimated 38,000 people left homeless, farmers who have lost a projected 10 percent of the 2008 corn crop and countless churches and parsonages that have been inundated from the ravages floods from of nine rivers. "The outpouring of tangible compassion from the church along with the resolve of local people to reclaim their lives is signaling hope, hope, hope," said Bishop Gregory Palmer, of the church's Iowa Area. Representatives from the United Methodist Committee on Relief are expected to tour Iowa by the first of next week to assess damage and formulate a response plan. To donate to UMCOR relief efforts in the Midwest, drop checks in church offering plates or mail directly to UMCOR, P.O. Box 9068, New York, NY 10087. Write Advance #906757 on the memo line of the check. Credit card donations can be made by calling (800) 554-8583 or online at www.givetomission.org.

With just a few modifications, a simple red wagon is transformed into "Lizzie’s Limo," enabling 4-year-old leukemia patient Elizabeth Long to navigate her hospital with the help of her family. She received one of the first wagons produced by the Wheels of Love ministry launched in 2007 at First United Methodist Church in Conroe, Texas, near Houston. The wagons are customized with IV poles, holders for oxygen bottles, car seats and a trailer. Retired millwright Richard Stanton started the ministry last year to help seriously ill children and their parents move more easily through hospitals, their homes and their communities. "Life is already turned upside down as it is," says Renee Moore, Elizabeth’s mother. "Just the fact that somebody cared enough to take the time to use their workmanship and their talents to make something that we can use and benefit from and make our life a little bit easier—it just really means a lot."

Migrant farm workers lured to the United States with promises of jobs and a better life sometimes end up enslaved, living in locked U-Haul trailers or other substandard housing and forced to work under abusive conditions. Such scenarios were explored when 42 young adults representing many faith groups attended the 2008 Young Adult Ecumenical Forum focusing on slavery and human trafficking in the 21st century. The June 12-15 event was held at Wesley Theological Seminary, a United Methodist-related school in Washington. "Slavery doesn’t just happen over there. We are all connected to it. We all gain some privilege from this system of slavery," said the Rev. Neal Christic, an executive with the United Methodist Board of Church and Society. "Every time I go to the supermarket, I am potentially fueling this boom of trafficking."

Grants and awards encouraging writing and research on topics related to the history of Methodism have been announced for 2008 by the United Methodist Commission on Archives and History. The annual grants allow the commission "to support scholarly research and help to ensure that neglected areas of study will receive the attention they deserve," said the Rev. Robert J. Williams, the commission’s chief executive. More information about the awards is available at http://www.gcah.org/site/apps/slnet/content3.aspx?c=hl4KnN1f.tH&b=2439678&ct=594733.
Agency awards $51,000 in Peace with Justice grants

United Methodist churches around the globe will use grants from the denomination’s social action agency to promote peace, restore communities and work for economic justice.

Eleven projects from Los Angeles to Liberia will receive Peace with Justice grants totaling $51,000 from the United Methodist Board of Church and Society.

Funding for the grants comes from a churchwide offering taken by local churches on Peace with Justice Sunday, celebrated on the first Sunday after Pentecost. It is one of six churchwide Special Sundays of The United Methodist Church. Annual (regional) conferences keep 50 percent of the offerings and the remaining funds are used for Peace with Justice grants administered by the agency.

In 2007, $301,357 was given to the Peace with Justice Sunday offering. The year before, the offering drew $266,925, an increase from $247,173 in 2005.

Projects for peace

Children once used “as channels for carrying out hatred across Liberia” gain a new perspective on life at the Brighter Future Children Rescue Center, operated by The United Methodist Church in Liberia. The project will receive a $5,000 grant to build its programs for former child soldiers ages 14-16. The children were “fed drugs and taught to murder,” said Frido N. Kinkolenge, director of the Department of Children’s Ministries, Liberia Annual Conference.

Youth exposed to violence in their communities and schools will get a chance to experience peace and learn leadership skills at the Youth Leadership Academy in Peacemaking in Los Angeles. The program is a ministry of United University Church in the California-Pacific Annual (regional) Conference. The $25,000 grant will be used for after-school and two-week summer peacemaking programs.

Other grants for 2008 include:

Memphis Workers Center, a project of the Mid-South Interfaith Network for Economic Justice, Memphis, Tenn., $5,000. The center educates immigrants and native-born low-wage workers about workplace rights.

Deep Roots, New Branches Initiative, Minneapolis, $5,000. Mimmehala United Methodist Church has developed an ecumenical affordable housing project for seniors and families in South Minneapolis.

Haiti Solar Oven Project, Brookings, S.D., $5,000. The project focuses on placing solar ovens in the hands of the poorest women in the Western Hemisphere.

National United Methodist Youth Fellowship in the Philippines, Outreach Youth-Youth Program, $5,000. This program will provide alternative education to millions of Filipino youths ages 7-14 who are not in school and help reintegrate them into the formal school system.

Strengthening Capacity Building for Peace and Justice, Riruta-Nairobi, Kenya, $5,000. This program provides a chance to experience peace and..."

D. Gibson, Ruth Daugherty, Judith Ehninger, Candace Carter, Robert Ladd, Verna Colliver, Marcus Simmons, Rebecca Parsons, Elizabeth Fisher, Mary Ann Repsher (Alt.), Debbie Wilcock Kenworthy (Alt.), Brenda Tildon (Alt.).

Clergy delegates: Charles Yrigoyen, Jr., Dorothy Watson Tatem, Alfred Maloney, Larry D. Leister, Michele Wright Bartlow, Rene Perez, Salazar, Melinda McKeon, William Gary George, Rodney Shearer, James Todd, Joseph DiPaolo, Christopher Kurien, Robin Hynicka (Alt.), Susan May (Alt.), Alfred T. Day III (Alt.).

Two youth delegates with voice, but no vote, will represent the Eastern Pennsylvania Conference: Gabriel Bedell and Ann Jacob.

Election of bishop

The Northeastern Jurisdiction will elect one bishop. Since General Conference extended the retirement age from 66 to 68, at least one of the three bishops now eligible to retire, Jane Middleton of Central Pennsylvania, has indicated a desire to continue in office. Bishops Violet Fisher and Susan Hassinger will retire. Hassinger has served as interim bishop to fulfill the unexpired term of Bishop Susan Morris, who retired in 2006 for health reasons. (See adjacent article by Ruth Daugherty.)

Merger to be decided

When the Northeastern Jurisdiction meets, delegates will decide to whether or not to merge the episcopal areas of New York West and Albany, comprised of the Western New York, North Central New York, Wyoming, and Troy Annual Conferences. If the merger is approved, the effective date would be in 2010. The action would reduce the number of bishops in the Northeastern Jurisdiction from ten to nine. Pennsylvania churches in the Wyoming Annual Conference would merge with the Central Pennsylvania Conference. Vermont churches in the Troy Annual Conference would merge with New England.

Assignment of bishops

The jurisdiction’s Committee on Episcopacy consists of one clergy and one lay person from each annual conference, and is responsible for assigning the bishops to their areas. The jurisdictional conference has the authority to affirm or reject the assignments. If the conference were to reject the assignments, the committee would be required to make new assignments. The assignment for bishops will become effective Sept. 1, 2008.

Episcopal candidates

Three candidates for the office of bishop were endorsed by the Eastern Pennsylvania Conference at its annual meeting May 29 and 30 in Philadelphia. The three candidates are Michele Wright Bartlow, Melinda L. McKonly, and Dorothy Watson Tatem.

Delegates to the conference will spend Tuesday, July 15 interviewing the thirteen episcopal candidates who have been endorsed by annual conferences and official caucuses of The United Methodist Church.

Conference events

The meeting will be held in Harrisburg, PA hosted by the Central Pennsylvania Conference at the Hilton Harrisburg Hotel and the Whitaker Center for Science and the Arts (attached to the Hilton). Bishop Jane Middleton of the Central Pennsylvania Conference will give the Episcopal Address. The Rev. Sophia Posua, director of Invitational Preaching for the United Methodist General Board of Discipleship, will lead a Bible Study, and will guide delegates in their discernment of episcopal candidates. The plenary will begin on the morning of Wednesday, July 16. The assignment of bishops will be announced on the morning of Friday, July 18, and will be followed at noon by the Consensus Service of Bishops which will be held at Grace United Methodist Church in Harrisburg.

Jurisdictional Conferences to elect bishops

by Ruth Daugherty*

The Northeastern Jurisdiction is one of five jurisdictions in the United States in which a jurisdictional conference is held every four years. All five of the jurisdictions meet at the same time determined by the Council of Bishops. This year the conferences will be held July 16 – 18. The Jurisdictional conferences are composed of an equal number of clergy and lay delegates elected by the annual conferences upon a formula established by the General Conference. In addition to the elected delegates, the Northeastern Jurisdiction has provided for twenty-nine youth representatives with voice, but no vote. One of the major functions of the Jurisdictional Conference is to elect bishops. The candidates are nominated by their annual conferences or by nationally recognized caucuses of The United Methodist Church. Candidates are to submit to the secretary of the Jurisdictional information, including a photograph, with pertinent and helpful information, standard as to style and length that has been established by the Jurisdictional Episcopacy Committee. The information for each candidate is sent to each of the delegates and reserve delegates at least two weeks in advance of the meeting of the Jurisdictional Conference. No other promotional or informational material is to be exhibited or distributed.

Delegates are requested to arrive on Monday evening, July 14, for Bible Study and involvement in a process of discernment. On Tuesday, July 15, delegates are assigned to groups to interview each candidate. During the official session of the conference on Wednesday, the Jurisdictional Committee on Episcopacy indicates the number of bishops to be elected. It is likely that one bishop will be elected during this conference. To be elected at the Jurisdictional Conference, a candidate must receive 66% of the votes. Voting is by ballots. Following are the candidates for bishop, listed in alphabetical order, for the 2008 Northeastern Jurisdiction:

Larry R. Baird
Western New York Conference

Michele Wright Bartlow

Vicki M. Brendler

Lazy days of summer?
by Lillian Smith

Summer is a time when visions of the Jersey shore, Dutch country, Poconos and summer camp rule. Summer's slower pace also provides time for preparation September. As you are enjoying the hazy and lazy days of summer, I invite you to prepare now for September's opportunity for ministry.

September, declared by our bishops as United Methodist Open House, provides each congregation with opportunities to intentionally invite members of the community to visit the church or its ministries. The Igniting Ministries website has a wealth of resources for Open House Month. Some of those resources include a friendliness audit and walk-through assessment and template for door hangers. Additional ideas include: Front-porch Hospitality, a New Bread Ministry, Chili Reception, Serve the Community, and more. Each idea is designed to help United Methodist congregations be more welcoming so that they can reach more people for Jesus Christ for the transformation of the world.

For more ideas, go to: http://www.ignitingministry.org/pdfs/open_house_ideas.pdf. Or go to: http://www.ignitingministry.org/welcome/openhouse.aspx and see the wealth of available resources.

A number of congregations are using, “Just Walk Across the Room,” by Bill Hybels and Ashley Wiersma, as a tool to equip persons for personal evangelism. This text encourages readers to listen to the promptings of the Holy Spirit, leave their comfort zones, and talk to people who are not yet in relationship with Jesus Christ.

Love Weems continues to remind us of our challenge – to reach more people, younger people and more diverse people for Jesus Christ. Bishop Marcus Matthews has challenged each congregation in the Eastern Pennsylvania Conference to grow by 10% in worship attendance, by January 2009. The resources from Igniting Ministry and Aldersgate Renewal Ministries can help in this effort.

Aldersgate Renewal Ministries, an affiliate ministry of the General Board of Discipleship, has a number of prayer guides that can be used by all of the members of our congregations. Some prayer guide topics include: “Prayer for Revival through the Power of the Holy Spirit,” “Prayer for Listening to the Holy Spirit,” and “Prayer for Pastors and Spiritual Leaders.” These resources are available at: http://www.aldersgaterenewal.org/resources/prayer/index.html. For more ideas, go to: http://www.ignitingministry.org/welcome/openhouse.aspx and see the wealth of available resources.

September is Open House Month!

Growing Congregations Reach Outside Themselves And Prosper

Dr. Lovett Weems, Wesley Theological Seminary, states it simply: We need more people. Growth should be the natural outcome of doing and being what the church is supposed to do and be.

United Methodist congregations have a basic mission: making disciples for Christ for the transformation of the world. If churches do that, they will grow. Making disciples includes evangelism. Natural church development is based on this.

General Conference established four denominational focus areas, including congregational development and new church starts. This represents one of the most important initiatives for United Methodism's future. The term congregational development encompasses many areas such as bringing new vitality to existing churches and church growth.

The Hartford Institute for Religious Research, which surveys U.S. congregations periodically, recently released FACTS on Growth. This research found that congregations with the following characteristics were likely to report growth:

Initiated a change in worship formats or style. More than half of the churches experiencing growth had made significant changes in worship formats in the past five years, primarily switching to or adding contemporary services.

Are located in new suburbs or downtown metro areas.

Avoided major internal conflict.

Started or maintained a Web site in the past year. This indicates the church looks outward and is willing to change using nontraditional means.

Are multicultural.

Have clarity about mission and purpose. They know why they exist and are clear about what they do.

Involve children actively in worship.

This helps the church to attract young adults and families.

Are intentional about growth. Congregations that developed plans to recruit members in the past year were more likely to grow than congregations that had not. Particularly helpful in achieving growth are sponsorship of a program or event to attract non-members or the existence of support groups.

These findings show how growth is correlated to these factors, but correlation does not equate to causality. Just because some growing churches do

A Special Call From God

Two years ago, while attending Wesley Theological Center’s Course of Study program in Washington, D.C., I felt called by God to work with the Muslim community to help foster better understanding and respect in our local communities. While in Washington, we visited a mosque and I was able to ask our guide about their participation in a D.C. area Interfaith group. A few months later, I attended an Interfaith Remembrance of 9/11 at Wesley UMC in Bethlehem, and talked to several of the participants afterward only to find out that there was no Interfaith group in the Lehigh Valley. Then I got a very clear message from God . . . “Wait on the Lord.” So I waited.

About six months later, a letter came to my parish from the Lehigh Dialogue Center (LDC), a group of primarily Turkish Muslims, inviting me to a FREE Turkish dinner, and an opportunity to hear some local leaders speak on the importance of dialogue.

The event was magical. I was greeted at the door and shown to a table where a half dozen Turkish men joined me for dinner. There were about 200 people there, and even a few that I knew. The Turkish food was delicious, the speeches were excellent, but the magic started after all that, when we all had some time to talk to those sitting at our tables. It was a time to learn a little about each other. I was so excited about the evening, that I could hardly sleep that night. The next day, I wrote a letter of thanks to Abdullah Bozkurt, the LDC President, and I told him I would like to work with him in promoting better Interfaith dialogue in the Lehigh Valley. We set up a meeting to discuss the possibilities. I spoke to their group at one of their Saturday Night events. Abdullah shared the Pillars of Islam with my Bible Study group and he gave copies of the Koran to those who were interested in having one as a reference. I invited Abdullah to speak with the Pastors of our Hellertown Area Ministerium (HAM) to see if we could plan one of those dinners in Hellertown. We did have the event and it was a tremendous success with about 100 people in attendance. As I looked around the room, I could see hearts changing. People from widely differing backgrounds were laughing and talking together.

I just returned from Turkey a week ago. I had invited my dear friend, Rev. Mary Elam, pastor of St. Thomas in Frankford to join me on the trip. There were so many exciting things to see and do in Turkey. I was impressed with the beauty of the Blue Mosque, the simplicity of the Virgin Mary’s last home near Ephesus, the wonderful educational system, the unusual landscape around Cappadocia, lunch at the foot of a waterfall, the view of the Mediterranean Sea from my hotel room, the winning Turkish Football Team, and the healthy Turkish cuisine.

But what impressed me the most, was the Turkish people. They are among the most hospitable people in the world. They not only invite you into their homes for an elaborate dinner, they treat you like royalty, and present you with a lovely gift. They are caring and concerned about our welfare, comfort, and happiness. They are proud of their country and want to share it’s rich heritage with us. They want to know the truth about us, not just what they hear and see in the newspapers, on TV, or in the movies. They are deeply committed to dialogue with other nations, cultures, and religions. They worked hard to raise money to provide us with first class accommodations and amenities while in Turkey. To me, all of these events I just described were orchestrated gifts from God, like stepping stones on the path he wants me to follow. My friends, when you are obedient to God, and follow where he leads you, you are in for some unbelievable blessings.
Urgent need for flood buckets

UMCOR has just put out an urgent plea for flood buckets. Mission Central, our warehouse in Mechanicsburg, has 1800 on hand that they will be shipping to the Midwest as soon as they get instructions on where to ship them. These will need to be replaced so they have inventory for the coming hurricane season.

Two locations in our conference have volunteered to be collection centers and they will transport the buckets to Mission Central. Please have all your buckets to them by September 1. It would be a good idea to call the locations before dropping off the buckets. The two locations are:

Emanuel, using the chapel in Central UMC for its ministry, grew and needed more space. In 1987, Central UMC and Park UMC, seeing decline in their reading churches decided to merge. Initially, Emanuel was told that there were no buildings available to grow into, news of the merger was not openly shared. Rev. Camacho said, “Then the decision was made to sell Park UMC bldg for $150,000. To make even worse, in the previous year, in 1986 at General Conference a resolution was adopted in regard to selling church buildings for $1. The Trustees in conference knew it. Instead of holding to the sale of $1, we bought it for $150,000.” In addition, “There were problems with Park structure and we were not told about it. Many things were unfair. Because we were new, we took the terms offered.”

“Forty reasons we could have left denomination,” said Rev. Camacho, “but Emanuel church decided to remain United Methodist for the rest of its life.” Emanuel paid rent monthly to Central Park UMC for the former Park building - even though most of the adults in the congregation were not employed. At one point, Emanuel even received an eviction notice from Central Park UMC for failure to pay rent. Superintendent Claude Edmonds came forward and provided money from the Ethnic Minority Concerns Committee, and an anonymous person committed $25,000 toward the purchase of building. Then they tried to raise the additional purchase price, but that was difficult in a transitional community that was growing but not stable.

Remarkably, five years ago, in 2003, Rev. Camacho received a call from Central Park UMC to become pastor for them, to serve half-time for Central Park and halftime for Emanuel. “Now, 20 years after leaving by the back door, the daughter made the decision to come back to the building that gave her birth,” said Rev. Camacho about the churches’ decision to merge.

Years of dialogue, years of healing
“God wants to make a church that has decided to really be one and work together and do things together,” said Rev. Comach. He paraphrased from John 17, “I pray for them… that all of us grow into; news of the merger was not openly shared. Rev. Camacho said, “Then the decision was made to sell Park UMC bldg for $150,000. To make even worse, in the previous year, in 1986 at General Conference a resolution was adopted in regard to selling church buildings for $1. The Trustees in conference knew it. Years of dialogue, years of healing
“God wants to make a church that has decided to really be one and work together and do things together,” said Rev. Comach. He paraphrased from John 17, “I pray for them... that all of them may be one.” That is our prayer that the whole community. We have different services - one in English and one in Spanish, but we are one in unity. The decision to merge did not come easily - there were years of dialogue and years of healing. Now there is one church that is witnessing God’s kingdom in this community, and for first time in more than twenty years, that church is getting life once again.” Since the Central District meeting on April 12, the church has been known as New Journey/Nueva Jornada United Methodist Church. And the new path for the church includes being proactive in taking care of things in its Reading community, one of the highest areas for prostitution and drug traffic in the city. The church is taking action, including allowing police to use the church for surveillance, helping police, and helping the community in the midst of crime. “We tell people, ‘if you see something happening, come to us’,” said Rev. Camacho, “the chief of police knows that this church is the one that is the main instrument for changes in the community!” Now senior citizens in the neighboring housing authority building are able to go out without being afraid. “It is because of that church,” they say. It is risky, but we need to be willing to take risks. If there is a price to be paid, God will be with us. If you want to bring God’s justice and righteousness into the world, there is a price and we cannot afford.”

Within the church, Pastor Camacho is also seeing changes - of individuals of different ethnicities crossing boundaries and frontiers in language and ways of feeling. He contends that in the merger of ethnicity, language, and theology the church has learned to be one.

The path to leadership development
The merger has led to unforeseen twists and turns in the path to ministry, as New Journey/Nueva Jornada will birth a Spanish-language seminary adjacent to the church in partnership with Asbury Seminary of Florida beginning in September.

A year ago, at the invitation of Bishop Marcus Matthews, Rev. Camacho, Rene Perez, Christopher Fisher, and Robert Wilt joined Bishop Matthews in a meeting with Asbury. The group was impressed with the success of Asbury’s Spanish-language theological program for Latino lay persons in Florida, which boasts that people are traveling two to three hours to attend classes, and has moved to using a church in order to accommodate the more than 50 students.

Bishop Matthews gave the assignment to Rev. Rene Perez, former director of Latino Ministries, to have that same training in partnership with Asbury in the Eastern Pennsylvania Conference.

“There are very few places to go for Spanish speaking theological training in the U.S.” said Rev. Camacho, “Our goal is to open the academy on September 1, 2008 in New Journey. Who would think we will have this academy here with Asbury? This is a dream coming true. This is for God’s glory: He can do what we cannot do, and He calls us to do what He wants to do.”

Escuela Teologica Evangelica Latina (Hispanic/Latina Evangelical School of Theology) will offer training in Spanish for lay persons, and will offer courses in Christian education, theology and mission, preaching and evangelism, starting new churches, pastoral counseling, and Biblical studies.

Rev. Rene Perez said, “This program flows out of a vision to provide training in Spanish for laity and clergy in the area of theology and ministry. This is the result of a visionary partnership between the Eastern Pennsylvania Conference and Asbury Theological Seminary.”

The school is open to persons of all Christian denominations. It will offer certification on Advanced Theological Studies, a bachelors degree, and a Masters in Divinity.

Gearing up churches for the November Elections
by Anne Ewing

Congregations are about to be bombarded with issues, speeches and opinions, flyers, invitations and TV ads from now until November 4th, when the 2008 General Election takes place. It is not something we can ignore, and definitely something for which churches should be prepared.

Voter Registration is the first issue to address. Our United Methodist Church urges and expects all members to participate wisely and carefully in all the elections to choose our representatives to Congress, state legislatures, city, town and borough offices and to the office of President of the United States. So, to make sure all your members are registered to vote and up-to-date, it will be good to offer voter registration services right in the church, at coffee hour, or at major meetings.

The forms are simple and easy to fill out. Use the same form for new registrations, change of address, change of party To vote in a primary in Pennsylvania you must be registered in that party; people registered non-partisan or independent do not get to vote in the primaries.

The deadline for voter registration in Pennsylvania: Your registration forms must be received IN your County Election office by October 6th, 2008. You must be a citizen of the US for 30 days before the election on Nov 4, and you must have been a resident in your election district for 20 days also. You must be 18 or on before the election date.

To obtain Voter registration forms: If your local elected officials and libraries do not have them, you should contact your County Board of Elections well in advance of the October Deadline.

Note: If your county is not here, go to http://www.dos.state.pa.us/voting/ Berks County: (610) 478-6490 Bucks County: (215) 348-6757 Chester County: (610) 344-6410 Delaware County: (610) 891-4699 headleycm@co.delaware.pa.us Lancaster County: (717) 295-3558 Lebanon County: (717) 274-2801 ext. 4428 Lehigh County: (610) 792-2998 stacysterner@leighcounty.org Montgomery: (610) 378-3280 Philadelphia County: (215) 686-1500 or 1503

Please resist anyone saying that elections are not the business of the church. As citizens of God’s creation, we have been given the care of this vineyard, and it’s important that we think and act with care in all things that affect our world, and our lives together.

In the next NewSpirit, we will address how churches, as non-profit organizations, can deal with issues in an election.
