Leading Racial Reconciliation for Youth Leaders

July 25th, 2020 10 am – 1pm via Zoom.

Register at https://na.eventscloud.com/YouthLead

In this experiential workshop for those who work with youth, the facilitators will present the biblical foundation of racial reconciliation and how to effectively implement it in your churches and youth and young adult groups. During this experience, participants will examine their own biases while learning how to navigate the tricky conversations with youth while being sensitive to the youth's parent's perspective.

This training is meant to equip youth leaders, support staff, and church groups with the resources required for intentional conversations regarding racial reconciliation. The training is meant to be used, experienced, and shared as a tool with students, parents, and ministry personnel.

Throughout the workshop participants can expect an experiential learning experience. The course will work to cultivate a solid Biblical foundation by utilizing testimonies, examining scriptural precedents, and working to understand the moral obligation that the Church has in leading the racial reconciliation effort.

At the end of the workshop participants will be able to:

- Define trauma
- Develop an historical context and basis for controversial conversations
- Establish empathic listening and response techniques to create a foundation for emotional healing.
- Define reconciliation from a theological perspective
- Create an action plan of moving forward to pioneer racial reconciliation in your own context

Egypt Speaks is a Spoken Word Artist, dynamic poet, emcee, speaker, and author. (www.egyptspeaksofficial.com/)

Keynan Williams serves as the Creative Director and Young Adults Pastor at Peoples Church. And is the founder of Tribe Collective.

(www.peopleschurch.co)

Lee Woodall, ex-NFL football star who leads charitable organizations and has dedicated his life to ministering to others.

(leewoodall.coachesconsole.co m/bio.html)

Cost is $20/person to help defray the costs of the speakers. Scholarships available, please contact David Piltz at dpiltz@epaumc.org or 814-883-0118.